RT @IAmAsake: NEW POST: 5 Relationship Mistakes Women Make /t.co/gWolpzHnRK

1. Follow Ghandour on Instagram @ghandourcosmeticslimited
2. Upload a photo or short video depicting their "African Dream"
3. Share on Facebook and Twitter.
4. Use the hashtags #africandream #ghandourcosmetics

"With the African Dream contest and Ghandour's continued marketing efforts, we are excited to play a role in our own small way, in re-shaping the New African story and sharing with the world all that is beautiful and wonderful about Africa," said Tanal Ghandour, the Founder and Managing Director of the Ghana based Ghandour Cosmetics which also operates in Mali, Togo, Burkina Faso and the Gambia.

The African Dream Contest will coincide with a social media campaign highlighting successful African personalities such as Kenyan actress, Lupita Nyong'o, Ethiopian filmmaker, Haile Gerima and Ghanaian diplomat, Kofi Annan who are transforming the world's view of Africa. Each day Ghandour will release images on their social media platforms giving homage to the selected African personalities who have achieved the "African Dream" in art, business, sports, entertainment, and community. Followers will also be encouraged to submit photos of their own African success stories using the associated hashtags.

"Now is the time for Africa to shine. For us, there is no more exciting place to be in business at the moment. People are beginning to realize that they can live their dream life in Africa despite some of its challenges," adds Ghandour.

Contestants will have until end of the day on 6th November to enter the Win the African Dream contest. For more information, contact publicist@Ford-Communications.net or follow Ghandour on Instagram @ghandourcosmeticslimited
